The couple celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary certainly deserve to celebrate. They managed to survive half a century of life's ups and downs together. During this time, the couple builds a legacy that cannot be measured in material values, but the life they touched through their union. Whether you're hosting a party at home, making it an intimate gathering at a restaurant, or deciding to throw a great serviced event, most of these tips can be used for this special occasion. You don't have to look too hard to put together a guest list for the party. Coverage of their life together includes family, friends, co-workers, neighbors, other members of the church, community groups and more. You can invite as many of them to a holiday as your budget can afford, or keep the guest list at a more intimate room if you think the couple would prefer a smaller fee. Before the party, ask guests to present their favorite memories of the couple in writing. It will also allow those who can't come to the party to participate. Collect them in a note as a gift for the couple. Make sure the venue is available to any guests who defy mobility. Even if the guests of honor are Hale and Cordial, they probably have friends and relatives who haven't been treated for years as well. The traditional symbol of the 50th wedding anniversary is gold, giving you the perfect element to create a beautiful scene for this party. Here are some ideas for how you can incorporate gold into your party decorations and table settings. Start by setting the table with ivory colored flax. Then add any of these gold accents to make the room shine: Gold paper doilies under the plates. Tie the golden ropes with tassels around the back of the chairs. Use white porcelain with gold trim. Serve the drinks in a crystal that has golden accents. Tie the napkins with the gold ribbon. Light the table with candles in a golden candlestick or a vow of holders. Collect photos from all over the couple's marriage, and place them on display in a gold frame. Write maps of the place with gold ink. Choose an unforgettable menu for not very newlyweds. It can be food based on the menu they shared on their first date. Consider recreating the menu from their wedding day. Or maybe it could be their favorite food- just this time they don't have to do cooking. Keep dietary restrictions in mind, so you offer the right choice for those who need them. Top anniversary cake with a topper of a wedding cake if you can sneak it away from them. Otherwise, create a cake topper of gold balls, gold leaves or even gold cupid. Don't forget to fry the guests of honor. You, as the host, should have special words to tell them. Coach a man or two in advance to start and break the ice. There are non-alcoholic options available, such as sparkling cider, so those who don't drink can still give a festive toast. For a musical background, playing songs from the decade the couple was married. Also, if their preferences tend to be to a different style of music, by all means choose songs according to their taste instead. Consider any of the following as the party stands for guests: a high-quality chocolate bar with a personalized wrapper to mark the day. A bag of chocolates wrapped in gold foil, bound with gold ribbon. A beautiful brocade bag filled with chocolate wrapped in gold foil that was tied with golden oxide. A small, golden tone of the picture frame with a portrait of the couple. A champagne split that was personalized for this event. Decorate each place with a mini vase filled with fresh flowers. Preferably the vase will have golden accents. At the end of the party, guests can take them home as a favour. The current trend is to give a gift to a couple's favorite charity on their behalf, instead of a party of favors. Give all guests a small card with a thank you note to visit that informs them of the donation. To celebrate its 50th anniversary, which will be celebrated on November 30 on ABC, we've 10 lesser-known facts about the quintessential Christmas show. Advertising - Continue reading below 1 Initially, the network were not interested in the Charlie Brown Christmas special. It wasn't until the Coca-Cola company expressed interest that producer Lee Mendelsohn and creator Charles Schultz got the job. The duo ended up getting the special sketch together in less than a day, and in the end, it was only six months to produce the show before its December airing on CBS. 2 There is no laugh track that was uncommon at the time. While Mendelsohn wanted to use one, Schultz was adamant that the show feel as authentic as possible. 3 Animator Bill Melendez provided Snoopy's voice. Producers have increased the speed of Melendez's tape to say gibberish to make it sound like Snoopy. 4 But other members of the Peanuts gang were voiced by actual children. While this may not seem unique, it was actually quite rare then to use children to voice characters. According to The Huffington Post, Melendez and Schultz were criticized for the decision, but the pair wanted the cast to sound as authentic as possible. Linus and Lucy were the only two characters to be voiced by professional actors. 5 There were many concerns about Linus' True Meaning of Christmas speech. Mendelsohn and Melendez were concerned the speech would be controversial, but Schultz insisted the show feature Linus reading from the Bible. 6 Special debuted second in the rankings that night. Charlie Brown's Christmas was viewed in about 15,490,000 homes, but eventually there was a goat airing bonanza. 7 The youngest actor was only six years old. Katie Steinberg, who voiced Sally Brown, was too young to read her lines, so producers had to repeat them in their sentence. 8 Famous jazz music in a special film was created by the trio of Vince Guaraldi. The soundtrack became one of the most famous Christmas music and was elected to the Grammy Hall of Fame in 2007. 9 Charlie Brown Christmas Stamps now available 10 50th anniversary special to be hosted by Kristen Bell.
